Weekly Newsletter from 19-23 October

Earning sessions will dominate next two weeks

Dear Members,

Last week was very a fruitful week for investors who believed in the market and held their investments. Commodities performed mixed but gold outperformed most of the commodities. Dollar remained under pressure and Thirty year traded mixed without any clear direction. Emerging market and emerging market currencies continued their performance and carried on from last week. In August every analyst as well as the FED were worried about China but now hardly anyone is talking about the negativity in China. We are still recommending buying China, India and the Brazilian markets as the astro cycle is turning very positive for these markets so weakness in them should be taken as a buying opportunity. In last two weeks BRZU, YINN and INDL performed very well.

At least once in a year I always try to remind our members that even though we all try to do our best to achieve success not everyone gets the same results because of the most power factor which is hidden but always with you and dominates what is happening and that's called the "luck factor". Most of you must have read the luck factor chapter many times in our books or our letters because I occasionally try to put it in as I feel it is important that you watch your own progress like any stock chart and find out where and how you are progressing.

Let's see a few example about how the luck factor works in our life, let's takes an example of Apple from October 2003:

One person bought Apple in October 2003 at $1.60, and held it till today.

Another person bought Apple in October 2003 at $1.60 and sold at let's say $11.00. He was very happy with his decision of buying Apple as it made him almost six times the money. After making a nice profit he might have spent money on a holiday, car, house renovation, or he may have invested the capital back into any speculation and might lost everything

Another person bought Apple in October 2003 at $1.60, in a few weeks he read that the stock was not acting well so he decided to sell it. He still feels like he missed the greatest money making opportunity in his life. He must have told his friends and family or even his broker that he bought Apple at the right time but unfortunately he sold it otherwise he could have been a multi-millionaire.

Another person bought Apple in October 2003 at $1.60 with full confidence that the new music product "iPod" would work but had to sell it because he needed the money either for health issues, job issues or wanted to pay his children's school fees.

One common man who doesn't understand the market much but he believed one of his friend's recommendations that Apple would come out with a great product so he bought it and is still holding.

Another person liked the iPod, but never liked Apple as a company, or Steve Jobs, so he neglected or refused to buy Apple and put the money in something else and lost that money.

One person liked Apple in October 2003 but unfortunately his cash was tied-up somewhere and he was not able to buy the stock.

Other person liked Apple and he had cash but he was either traveling or busy with other important work or issues so he missed the buying opportunity.

We can put hundreds of such examples, or you can look back at your own life and you will be able to find how each decision that you made created a new path. Whenever you make any decision, it means that you have created a path and that path either ends happily and you are satisfied with the outcome; or many times you regret what you have done and wish you wouldn't have had made that decisions.

Analyzing the luck factor is a great study, but there are hardly any out there who can find out how their decisions will turn out; or in other words, whether they will be lucky or not. Luck is a hidden factor and it is always around you, but you have to catch it and this process requires an in depth study of the astro cycles or you can go into deep meditation and find the error which caused your failure or the other missing elements which could have changed the results.

In the last three decades I have always given importance to the luck factor, and whenever we read the astro chart of any country or any financial instrument I put so much attention and focus on the luck factor because any stock can make you money or bring loses. Apple has been our favorite stock, and in June 2013 when Apple was at $392 (before the stock was split), I was reading the astro chart of Apple and I said 'Oh my God, this company can provide enormous wealth to its investors!' and most of you have witnessed how positive we were on Apple stock with the target of $1500. Currently it is trading around $110 and it should achieve $188 in the next 18 months according to our 2013 June predictions.

Anyways, try to find what is the best decision that you have made so far and what was the main reason behind making that decision. The same applies to the worst error etc. It will take a few minutes every day to analyze your own life chart pattern like any stock chart. If you keep making errors and the results are not in your favor, it means that your luck factor is not on your side, so better to stay away. If you are doing something and the results are in your favor then it means that the luck is in your favor and you should leverage it.

It is a deep study so I don't want to go far into it, but surely try to understand your life pattern and you will be able to reveal many hidden tools which will help you to make life better and more successful. Surely reading the astro chart is one of the most powerful tools we have and one can very easily find out whether the current cycle is in your favor or not. I wish I could read your charts. I used to enjoy reading peoples chart but I stopped over a decade ago. In the future I will just keep one day in a week or in a month for reading astro charts but only for my members. Currently we are more focused on predicting the markets trend and spend most of my time with myself or you can call it meditations.

Let me come back to this week's weekly newsletter for all major markets from 19-23 October 2015

GOLD/SILVER/BASE METALS

Last week gold performed very well, and metal stocks also started moving up early in the week, but struggled to move higher on Thursday and Friday. DUST was in our buying list on Thursday around $11.75 and we are sure many of you must have taken small positions in it because our view is still not very bullish for metal mining stocks, but at the same time we are also not predicting any major either side move in metal stocks. Yes they will trade with 20% to 25% moves in the either side direction for the short and medium term time. Mid May 2015 we strongly recommended buying DUST at $12.00, and we were fortunate to recommend booking profit around $32.00 level. This time we don't recommend aggressively buying DUST like in May 2015 but surely one can buy a small quantity here.

Mining industry and metal investors are watching Glencore very closely, and so far in the last two weeks Glencore has been able to keep away all the negative, news but we are still not recommending buying Glencore, or trusting whatever Glencore says, so in simple words stay away from metal stocks and any sharp rise in base metals should be taken as a selling opportunity as the fear will arrive in metals in the month of November and the yearend could turn out quiet nasty for metal investors.

Currently many metal or mining analysts and experts are talking about a bottoming out in commodities but we don't see that case at this stage. In 2001 when we predicted a bottoming out in commodities, that prediction was very loud. I forced my close friends and followers to put money in metals and mining stocks every single day from 2001. I kept repeating same advise in each and every newsletter, 'Buy gold, silver, base metals, oil and grains with targets of $1600 in gold, $50 in silver and $100 in oil.' Unfortunately the current astro cycles are not allowing us to predict any buying in metals and metal stocks even though HUI (Gold bugs Index) is down from 638 to 138 and gold is down from $1925 to $1180.

The last two weeks our view were positive in metals, and this week that positivity is ending on Tuesday so any rise should be taken as a selling opportunity. Those who bought it should get out 100% by Tuesday or around $1180.

The last two months have been bit positive for metals as metals kept rebounding from lows, and the same has been happening with metal stocks. This was supposed to happen, because the overall cycle from 1 August was positive but 70% of that positivity ended last week on Thursday. The remaining positivity will end on 2 November.....

This week on Monday and Tuesday metals may try to trade on both sides or will rebound from lows. Gold will not be able to cross $1191 level as mentioned and won't be able to close above $1184 for three days in a row (which is one cycle of the Moon).

From Wednesday to Friday Gold prices will struggle to move higher so selling pressure will be there on the lower sides. We recommend staying away from any buying in metals, base metal.

You will get a buying opportunity but you have to wait for that. It may take a few..... (Important part here so we removed)

Base metals may trade in a mixed trend but they will follow gold. Late Tuesday will be the right day to sell copper, zinc, nickel, lead and aluminum.

Silver is acting positively but.... (Important part here so we removed)

We are sure that no one is predicting this kind of a fall in gold and silver, and most will refuse to believe these numbers, but you should remember that we are following the same theory which gave us the great buying prediction in metals in 2001.

Important note: If metals trade positively from Wednesday to Friday then gold and other metals may hold value for another 12 days, but there is very limited time pending as a scary November is coming. Please remember to not forward this newsletter to anyone. Even if your close friend asks you, tell them to subscribe and get their own copy because you shouldn't be breaking the law of nature. My humble request not to forward, as we are all aware that law of nature is connected and plays a part with the luck factor because any deeds (good or bad) we do knowingly are accountable in final results. The rest I leave up to you.....

Here is Monday's range: (December 2015 contract):

GOLD: $1180.50 to $1166.00

SILVER: $16.11 TO $15.77

COPPER: $243.00 TO $237.00

PALLADIUM: $702.00 TO $686.00

PLATINUM: $1025.00 TO $1001.00

INDEXES

Last week most of the global equity markets moved higher as predicted. In the first week of August our view on the market turned very negative. On the 25th of August 2015 we predicted that the market won't fall below that day levels. On 15 September we predicted that this was a great time to acquire positions in the market, and on the 2 October on the job data we predicted that there would be a huge turnaround in the market from current levels.

Many think that making predictions is the most simple job, but if you ask me what I have to say, then my answer will be that it is not easy to understand because firstly we are using a theory which is not main stream like technical charts, or fundamentals. Surely both of these are a small part of our theory, but the major part is the astro cycle which helps us understand the behavior pattern, but to the common man it looks like a myth.

I know how thin a line I have been walking on since 1983, because any major wrong prediction can destroy my image, this is what the world is like. You can do a hundred good things, but one small mistake and everyone is at your throat or talks about you in a negative way. Many time I have the fear that those who love my work can start hating me if I am wrong on any major prediction. In the month of September many of our members asked us whether this market would rebound? And I am fortunate that they were asking humbly and I responded to them with a simple, 'Yes, buy S&P around 1863 and you will be rewarded.' I still want to walk on that thin line because I trust the astro theory more than anything else on this planet.

The market has been performing very well for the last two weeks, as many stocks in the US and internationally rebounded very strongly. I am sure many investors must be invested in biotech stocks which are not performing well currently and we do not see them performing well in the next three months. Our favorite area is still technology and financial. Industrial stocks will play a big role in the coming bull cycle. Since 2011 we have been predicting a bull market and so far the market has been acting nicely. We will be very satisfied as an advisor the day S&P hits 3200. We strongly recommend investing money in tech, financials and industrial stocks, but at this stage tech is our top pick. Many tech companies will announce their earnings in the next two weeks, and their move will decide which way this market is going to move, and whether it will dent or enhance the investor's sentiments. Our view on tech earnings is very bullish so we recommend investing in this sector even at current levels, and you will be rewarded nicely. Watch our daily stock report closely because we will be writing about how earnings will be for key stocks.

The emerging market started performing very well even though big investors and the FED are worried about them. Our view is not negative at all so those who would like to invest for the medium and longer term can put money in China, India and Brazil.

Natural resources (metals and energy) stocks will trade mixed to negative so we do not recommend any buying in energy and metals stocks even though they are trading lower at very attractive prices. Have patience and you will have a great buying opportunity in the next year. In fact, we strongly recommend getting out of energy stocks as they have performed very well ever since we recommended buying them one month ago.

On Monday we see the global equity market trading on both sides. On Tuesday more positivity will come but from mid-session we see some profit booking coming in the market. On Wednesday the market will trade on both sides with an underlying negative trend. Thursday will be a great day to acquire positions in the market on any weakness and hold your positions very tightly as on Friday the markets will move higher. Most of the global markets will follow the US market, and the emerging market will trade in a positive direction from the middle of the week.

As predicted S&P has bounced back very strongly from 1863 and our first astro resistance is coming at 2042 so watch this level closely. Once S&P starts trading above this level and closes above it for three days then our next target is 2111. We still believe that S&P might achieve 20% or more than 20% gain by March 2016 and NASDAQ will achieve the same amount of percentage. This week IBM, Amazon, Google, Microsoft, Morgan Stanley and Boeing will be announcing earnings. I will put a detailed report in my stock report so follow it closely....

Here are Monday's ranges: (December contracts)

HONG KONG (cash) – 23330 to 23039

NIKKEI – 18630 TO 18305

THIRTY YEAR BOND

Last week bond prices traded mixed....

SOFT COMMODITIES

Last week coffee prices failed to hold value which resulted in sharp corrections...

GRAINS

Last week grains prices came down in the second half of the week as expected....

ENERGY

Last week oil prices traded as predicted. We advised booking profit in oil above $49, so I am sure that many of the traders who bought oil at $43.50 must have booked profit. Last week energy stocks performed very well.....

CURRENCIES

Last week most of the currencies traded mixed to a bit positive against USD, but surely emerging market currencies performed amazingly well as predicted....

IMPORTANT NOTE:

Commodities have been trading positively and they rebounded from lows. CRB Index has started to crawl higher from the bottom, but this week and the month of November will be testing time for commodities. We still recommend not trusting any positive news from GLENCORE. Keep adding quality stocks to your portfolio and we are sure you will be rewarded handsomely within in the next 18 months.
