Weekly Newsletter from 27-31 July 2020

Commodities and currencies are at important juncture....

Dear Members,

Meditations is one of the most beautiful light that exists within us which can keep expanding and we can feel the whole universe within us. Whatever time I spend in the morning and during the day in mediation is always a beautiful and happy feeling that brings me back always on the karmic path with a big smile.

I always recommend people to spend some time alone with themselves, either take a cup of coffee, tea or hot water and just spend some time alone. A light with start blinking and slowly that light will become a part of you and you will start feeling that you are part of natures created universe and you are connected with it.

I used to spend a lot of time meditating with my friend Mike in Santa Barbara during 2004/5/6 and I enjoyed those very precious moments; I was left alone along in Santa Barbara and Mike moved to Florida.

My spiritual journey started at a very young age around 4 years old, but I always remained in the “Sansaarik” world, and when you remain in the Sansaarik world then love, hate, greed, happiness and sorrow become a part of our daily life and it is very difficult to detach. Let me tell you honestly that I am not able to detach from all these things but surely, I am able to reduce the attachment and I don’t think that I will be able to detach from all this Sansaarik Kriya until I don’t become a saint. But remember in one of the articles I mentioned that most of saints also carry greed – like for building a big temple, they also want a big crowd around them, they also want to become very popular and better than others or they have a unique power and they are closer to God.

The best way to remain is to be who we are, do what we like to do and keep doing good Karma, and helping the needy if we can. Just enjoy this life and do justice to this life and be within our self in a sensible Karmic path.

Yes, I started this letter with Meditations and that is the master key to enter in the room which could lead you to the door which may take you on the most exciting journey or universe and you will find yourself there in your selfrealization or in awareness. I think this is so beautiful and one should experience this every morning and then for the rest of the day we can keep doing our daily “Karmic Kriya” in this most complex world.

I also have the greed/desire to become 100% accurate in my work; I also feel sometimes that I should have the best house, best car and/or other material things and these thoughts or demands may keep coming but remember if nature helps you to have all of these then surely you can fulfill your desires and I don’t see anything wrong in that but we should always remember the parallel path of good Karma and helping the needy. That's the right way you can balance your life in this crucial journey which started on the day you were born and will end the day you depart. I think we just need to make a small adjustment within ourselves rather than drastic changes that aren't sustainable, and the results will be amazing.

Anyways, lets come back to the financial market because you subscribe to this letter to know what trends are coming in financial market. Last week precious metals performed amazingly well, US Dollar lost value and globally the market started struggling from Thursday.

Great earnings which were seen from MSFT and TESLA failed to pull the stocks further higher. On Friday of last week INTEL lost 16% value, but one-time tiny company gained 16% value. In one of last week's stock reports, we talked about our 2016 recommendations of AMD at $3.50. We predicted that the stock could to towards $75 too $100 and look at AMD now, it has been continuously moving higher. We hardly recommend to trade in and out in our favorite stocks, we always recommend adding our favorites on any weakness. If you follow technical charts and other short-term strategies in long term investments, then you won't be able to create wealth. I have hundreds of examples where people tell me that Mahendra we bought Apple at $3.00 but sold it when it doubled or when it went higher to $20.00.

You don't want to do error with companies where you see a great future. Look at INTEL Corp, it started outsourcing its work and lost innovation. AMD, NVDA and many small players become giants. Look at my recommendations of buying NVDA at $18.00 of 2014, and how bullish my view was on both NVDA and AMD.

You need to sell or get out if a company is not innovative enough or they are ignoring newcomers. Look at IBM, Kodak, Intel, Ford motor, Sony, Nokia and list goes on. We will talk about this subject next time but surely watch emerging players because they bring changes and if the old giants ignore them then it's better to sell these old companies and go with the emerging players. Look at Apple, Amazon, Microsoft, ADBE who keep adopting new technology, they are not leaving room for other small companies to move forward and the day they do that will be top for all of these companies. Microsoft had the platform of Skype but they failed to monetize and companies like ZOOM came in and took over that segment. Microsoft came out with a Windows Phone but without innovative ideas they failed to become one of the top handset company, they should have become. Apple did it successfully when both of these PC operating companies were a key rival and Microsoft was enjoying the competition, but Apple came out with a great product of IPOD which was a game changer and then they never looked back. Thank God, Satya Nadella came in for Microsoft otherwise they could remain far behind.

Final note: Adopt a strategy and keep developing rather than jumping from one to another. If you have right strategy to invest then surely you will make money and no one can stop you doing that, but if you try fancy and short-term trading then you will lose core strength of building wealth due to the mindset short term thinking.

This week FFIV, NXPI, V, PFE, MCD, SBUX, LSCC, AKAM, GLW, AMD APPLE, AMZN, GOOGL and FB will announce earnings along with hundreds of other key companies.
